Durham Castle and Cathedral The bridge in the picture, built by Bishop Flambard in 1120, gives a grand view of the Castle and Cathedral, which occupy a commanding position on a hill that is almost surrounded by the River Wear. The Castle, anciently the Bishop's Palace, has been adapted to the use of the University of Durham since 1833. The Cathedral dates from the tenth century, when the monks of Lindisfarne brought here the body of St. Cuthbert, but the present noble building is principally of the eleventh and twelfth centuries.
